

Successful Dealer

American Power Group updates website

Successful Dealer Staff August 5, 2014

American Power Group Corporation announces the launch of its new and improved website.

The new site provides a more user friendly approach to communicating all facets of American Power Group and its Turbocharged Natural Gas Dual Fuel solutions for both vehicular as well as stationary applications, the company says. The website was designed so visitors can quickly and efficiently understand the benefits associated with using APG's dual fuel solutions as well as appreciate the magnitude of today's addressed markets as well as those in the future.

American Power Group increases Canadian presence

American Power Group notes rise in dual-fuel adoption

American Power Group announces new business deal

"It's all about empowering customers, investors and other visitors by arming them with information they need to make their respective decisions," says Lyle Jensen, CEO.

"The website incorporates APG's new colors and bold images focused on each dual fuel target-market. Customers can easily search for the right solution for their respective application which includes Class 8 vehicular conversions, award winning APG Dual Fuel Gliders, oil and gas conversions, critical care back-up systems and various international power applications. In addition to a more content-driven website, a mobile version of APG's site is being implemented and is expected to be accessible in the next few days."